BLIND YOUTH BECOMES ENTHUSIASTIC GOLFER

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 28 (UP)—Determined to overcome his handicap by persistent application to varied sports, utilizing his other senses which have strengthened through training, Don Morgan, 18, Voshon Island blind athlete, is developing into a phenomenal golfer.

Morgan lost his sight in 1928, in an Independence Day explosion. He is powerful in physique and mind, and was an athlete at his high school before he was blinded. When he left the hospital, he determined to continue his athletic endeavors, and one of his strongest desires is a wish to help stroke a Cornell university crew to victory.

He entered Cornell last fall and won the stroke position on the arts college crew.

Golf, he found more difficult, but he is developing his game with the help of a shepherd dog, Wolf, and by sound. When he drives, Wolf races after and locates the ball. When he is on the green, Morgan places the cup by sound while a companion rattles the pin against its sides. In a recent demonstration of his ability he sank six out of eight 10-foot putts.

He plans to continue his golf, and to return to Cornell this year and resume his rowing efforts.

Mrs. Cooper's sister, Mrs. Lottie Goodspeed of Burlingame was riding with her at the time of the accident and escaped with a few bruises.

NOTED PSYCHOLOGIST SECURED FOR REDWOOD

Dr. James Heady, Noted Lecturer, Wit, and Character Reader To Give Four Free Lectures Here Beginning Tuesday, Sept. 2, in McKinley School Auditorium

Dr. James M. Heady, who begins a series of lectures and demonstrations in Redwood City on Tuesday, September 2, is no stranger to many who have heard him during his campaigns at San Francisco and Oakland, and during his radio broadcasts on KFRG, KFWI and during the month of July on KTAB.

Dr. Heady long since earned the title of "America's Most Entertaining Lecturer." He is equally well known as a writer, having been employed by many of the leading newspapers and magazines. He has crowded to capacity the auditoriums of the largest cities on the Pacific Coast, and there is no reason that he should have less than a capacity house at the school auditorium on Tuesday night. His lectures are not only instructive, but they are also highly entertaining. As a humorist and story teller he is in the same class as Will Rogers and the other recognized champions.

Dr. Heady is not content to monopolize the time and interest of his audiences and is making arrangements to give "the home talent" a chance. So, to this end, any reader of this paper is invited to get in touch with our office and either arrange to sing, dance, play, speak or perform on the stage during Dr. Heady's campaign or to give us the name of some talented person in Redwood City that we may be able to persuade to make an appearance. In his previous campaigns every variety of talent from a three year old dancer to an 85-year-old fiddler have divided honors with this gifted lecturer, entertainer and teacher.

Dr. Heady's campaign is sponsored by the Times-Gazette and Redwood City Standard and the local merchants.

Don't miss Dr. Heady's campaign. It starts Tuesday, September 2. You are invited to present only questions dealing with a problem of health, happiness or success at any time during the campaign. Write them at home or after you arrive at the auditorium. Sometime during the evening Dr. Heady will at least attempt to answer your question.

Another notable part of his program is the character and vocational analyses each evening of volunteers from the audience.

Six or more people who are of course strangers to him will be invited on the stage and their outstanding characteristics will be delineated. Not only will this be done but the audience will be taught the method by which it is accomplished.

One of the outstanding features of Dr. Heady's campaign is the fact that he does not conduct a paid class at the end of his lectures. There is no charge for any instruction given by him. Another point of difference is that no collections are taken at any time. Admission is free and the public is cordially invited.

Former Resident Seeks Lodge Post

Redwood City people will be interested in the candidacy of Miss Stella Linscott for grand secretary of the Order of Eastern Star at the grand chapter convention in Oakland opening September 13.

Miss Linscott, who is at present supervisor of rural school attendance in Napa County, formerly resided in Redwood City and was a member of the Sequoia High School faculty. YOMECAN CLUB HAS COMEDY DEBATE MEET

The Yomecan Club had a very interesting meeting Wednesday evening at the Sequoia Hotel with Henry Moore, as chairman. Instead of having a speaker a comedy debate was put on by Wesley Haydock and Lawrence Driven, which kept the members in an uproar.

Instead of the drawing for the attendance prize a story was read with missing words into which the names of the members had to be inserted. Elvin A. Guilelmoni was the winner of this affair. Norbert Lambert, the acting president, conducted the business meeting. It was decided to put a volleyball team into the Business Men's League. The following were signed up to play in the Yomecan team: Adam Patterson, Lawrence Driven, Ed Holmquist, Elmer Steinke, Ed Grooley and Walter Kellogg, Jr.

An invitation is being extended to the Exchange Club to hold a joint meeting on Wednesday, September 10th.

SERVICES TOMORROW FOR ATHERTON MAN

Services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock for Richard Kuehgen of Atherton, who passed away at his home there yesterday. LOOKS LIKE MONA LISA

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., (UP)—A striking resemblance between Miss Stella Lacey, Springfield, and the famous painting of Mona Lisa of Leonardo da Vinci, was brought out recently when photographs of the painting and Miss Lacey were published side by side. Looking at the two pictures it was possible to see similarity in the eyes of the two subjects and a more striking similarity about the mouth. Last of all the noses of both are almost identical in contour. Other facial features bore a remarkable likeness.

Redwood Youth Runs Down Aged Jewish Rabbi

Rabbi Simon Lifshitz Dies When Struck by Car On Bayshore

An automobile driven by Charles Quan, 15-year-old Chinese youth of 205 Maple street, Redwood City, ran down a killed Rabbi Simon Lifshitz, 78-year-old rabbi of San Francisco, on the Bayshore highway Tuesday night. The accident occurred near the San Francisco county line. The aged rabbi was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found he was dead.

Quan told San Francisco police that the rabbi stepped off the curb on Donner street directly into the path of his automobile, and that he could not avoid hitting him.

The Chinese youth was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Lifshitz had been rabbi of Temple Achavah Achaheim in San Francisco for the last seven years and is survived by his widow, three sons and a daughter.

Prof. Smith Hurt

Professor Joseph Smith, 78, music teacher and organist of St. Mathew's Episcopal Church in San Mateo, was seriously injured when he was struck by an automobile as he alighted from a street car on San Mateo drive in San Mateo Tuesday night. The machine was driven by Harry Perry 323 South Claremont street, San Mateo, who took the aged musician to the Mills Memorial Hospital. Smith is suffering from a fractured ankle, a fractured leg and possible internal injuries. Attending physicians report his condition serious.

THOMPSON IMPROVING

Supervisor Thompson of Pescadero is reported to be improving rapidly at the Stanford hospital in San Francisco, where he was taken last Monday for an operation. The supervisor had been released from the hospital a few days before, and had attended the meeting of the supervisors. At the meeting he became ill and had to be taken to the hospital for another operation. He was suffering with mastoid trouble.

ROLPH IN SAFE LEAD IN GUBERNATORIAL FIGHT

State Drys May Unite on Independent Candidate At General Election in November in Attempt To Beat Rolph

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27 (UP)—a total of 10,183 in the state, were reported as follows:

Mayor Rolph, 326,713; Governor Young, 295,322; Burton Pitts, District Attorney of Los Angeles county, 255,185.

Rolph's advantage over Young was 31,391.

The San Francisco candidates showing in the combined totals of the State's six largest counties, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Alameda, San Diego, Fresno and Sacramento, was impressive. In these counties he polled 229,568 votes against 203,837 secured by Pitts and 173,176 by Young, with 5758 precincts out of 6250 in these counties reported.

In the face of these returns from the ballots cast Tuesday, a movement was started by G. H. Dandall, Los Angeles City Councilman and Dry Leader, to secure an Independent who would uphold a Dry platform and oppose Rolph in the final next November.

Although Rolph did not announce his opinion on the Eighteenth Amendment during his campaign, he has always been accepted by citizens of the state as a wet.

"Against repeated and earnest protests, the Drys of this state divided, part for Pitts and part for Young, and the result was inevitable," Randall admitted. "A conference of the Dry and Progressive leaders of the state will be called to the end that a candidate may be selected who is representative of the overwhelming Dry army which split its vote between Young and Pitts."

Randall suggested that the candidate chosen at such a meeting might be William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of Treasury, or Harlan G. Palmer, Hollywood publisher. In the event such a suggestion should be carried out Rolph would probably receive his greatest opposition from the Independent candidate. Otherwise the nomination is virtually tantamount to election since Republicans in California who apparently chose Rolph as their leader far outnumber Democrats. Milton K. Young was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Rumors that an official recount of the votes might alter the totals somewhat became widespread today but could not be confirmed. The vote in Los Angeles county was mentioned particularly. William M. Kerr, registrar of voters in that county, said, however, that while the count was unofficial he felt it was fairly accurate and there was not enough percentage of error to change the general trend of it.

Governor Young was leading both opponents in a vast majority of the 58 counties of the state but they were practically all small ones. Young was leading in 40 counties, Rolph in 14 and Pitts in four.

Nearly three fourths of Pitts's total vote had been secured in Los Angeles county while Rolph, running closely behind the present Governor in all 40 counties the latter was capturing, had amassed a total of about 34,000 votes more than Young in San Francisco county and 67,000 more than Pitts here.

Rolph's Victory

By D. E. O'KEEFE

The splendid victory of James Rolph, Jr., on Tuesday last when he was chosen governor of his native state is a delight to his admirers and friends throughout the state. The victory was decisive. It was complete. It shows the popularity of the mayor. Mayor Rolph had to compete with the strong organization of the present administration of Governor Young which left nothing undone to retain its power and prestige and the sectionalism of southern California, that portion of the state having the big vote, and withal he decisively defeated both his opponents, Governor Young and Burton Fitts, the fighting district attorney of Los Angeles. The big corporations of the state and capitalists opposed him. The press of the state was aligned against him. The Times-Gazette was one of the few papers in California that heartily supported James Rolph and its takes some credit for the great victory accorded the mayor. It was the first paper in the state to announce his name for governor.

The governor-elect is one of the best known and best beloved men in the state. The large vote he received shows this. Mr. Rolph will make a good governor and we at this time bespeak success for the new administration. The governor's flag is to be often seen in San Mateo county when he will visit his country home in the Alpine District in this county. We congratulate Mr. Rolph on his success and with thousands of others offer him our very best wishes for continued honors.

Well, That's That

Election is over. The ballots are counted, and there appears to be a general attitude on the part of the candidates, both successful and otherwise, to leave a sigh, and say, "Well, thank heaven, that's over."

Elections are great institutions. They bring to the surface many petty jealousies and irritations and magnify these into seemingly paramount issues. Many things are said and believed during election time which would not be dreamed of at any other time.

The present election went off quietly as elections go, with few upsets in the expected order of things. The Republican party was successful in securing for its candidate the popular mayor of San Francisco.

In the county election with two exceptions the incumbents were successful in retaining their offices, a thing to be expected, as faithful service in office should certainly be rewarded by continued confidence.

In the case of the two exceptions, those of Mrs. Kneese and Mrs. Cooper, this paper regrets seeing two such fine public officials put aside. Both have served the county faithfully and well.

While this paper feels a deep personal friendship for Mrs. Kneese through many long years of cordial relationship it holds no grudge against her successor, E. B. Hinman, whom the people of the county have seen fit to elect. Throughout the past campaign, while the efforts of this paper were directed to the aid of Mrs. Kneese, no statement derogatory to her opponent was made. He is now elected and this paper joins in wishing him all success in office.

In the case of Mr. Jenkins, successor to Mrs. Cooper, we also extend congratulations upon his election and wish him continued success.

Facts Speak

There is little unemployment on our farms these days. Farmers are not the sort of people found in bread lines. Agriculture does not offer large returns for the time and money invested therein. This may be said of it, that the farmer who practices his art with intelligence and diligence rarely wants for a competency in his old age.

Why Wait?

It is folly for us to wait until somebody else echoes the word that the public is buying as usual. The same psychology that makes business cowards can be turned to make business even better than usual.

Don't be too hard on the government. Moses himself, with considerable more help from on high than our statesmen seem to have, wasn't able to prevent occasional nullification of the Ten Commandments.

European or World

Fears are frequently expressed that M. Briand's and Victor Hugo's plan for a United States of Europe might result in intercontinental rivalries and jealousies; ending with Pershing's prophesied "civilization going down thro' destructive war and darkness to barbarism."

Having lately returned from the Institute of International Relations, held in the new International House on the campus of the University of California, and reading of a similar International House in New York, I may perhaps be pardoned for calling your readers' attention to a plan that would dispel any fears of intercontinental troubles.

Governments exist for various purposes, administration of Justice, maintenance of law and order, issuing currency or coin, furnishing postal facilities, imposing tariffs, building roads, etc., etc. Of these functions some are already performed perfectly on a universal plan; notably the post office, efficiently transmitting not only letters and parcels, but carrying cash to every corner of the globe. Also world wide in operation and regulation are the telegraph, telephone, and radio; and, though at present there is no World Mint or Treasury, the notes of the American Express, or Cook & Sons, are negotiable wherever one may travel.

Moreover there is already extant the International Court of Justice, and the League of Nations, which includes Europe, Asia, Africa, and, in part, America; the League only lacking the adhesions of the U. S. A. to be practically omnipotent in world affairs.

So instead of mankind making a fearsome bugbear of Washington's "entangling alliances" it would be more worthy of this 20th century to celebrate worldwide his 200th day by carrying out his "first wish, to make that plague of mankind, war, banished from the earth" by world federation.

Such action would multiply manufacture and commerce, instead of killing off customers in millions by war, and would make universal that disarmament which has for over a century proved so satisfactory on our northern border. It would at least be a "noble experiment," and might succeed.

Political Legislation

In a recent editorial the Boston News Bureau says, "Legislatures exist for the purpose of legislating, and some members are so conscious of their duty that they put their brains to work originating legislation, when there is nothing that seems obviously to need a new law." It then cites the attempt of a Massachusetts lawmaker to provide means of limiting or regulating the use of machines and inventions which save labor, in order to lessen unemployment.

It is interesting to note that without our labor-saving machinery, workers in the United States, which has forged ahead of the rest of the world by being first to take advantage of new inventions, would find themselves competing on equal terms with European and Asiatic workers accustomed to lower standards of living.

Concluding its comment, The Boston News Bureau says, "Perhaps such suggestions make good campaign material for politicians seeking the vote of the unemployed. But they also make good campaign material for those who decry the intellectual capacity of democracies to govern themselves."

Home

The mother who makes home pleasant to her sons by gathering fresh, innocent, well-bred girls about her, does a wise thing; for graceful virtue is the best antidote to vice; and such things keep youth more effectively from harm than all the wise laws and modern instances morality can quote.

A NOISE SICKNESS

A group of New York experts have been testing, at Bellevue Hospital, the effects of noise on the human system. Results show that country quiet may be as important as fresh air in the cure of human ills. Tests on patients who had had portions of their skulls removed by a necessary operation showed that the explosion of a paper bag produced most noticeable brain pressure. What then of all the crashes of city traffic? The wonder is that more taxi-drivers do not get shell-shock.

It's high time more women took part in elections. Just look at the way the men allow the political pot to boil over.

Whenever a man buys a shirt he gives employment to 50 persons, the Department of Commerce informs us. And 47 of the 50 are the villains who hide pins all over the bloomin' thing.

Paris reports that "legs have definitely vanished from the style picture." And it has been only a year or so since bow-legged persons thought they would never get a break.

It Seems to Me by HEYWOOD BROWN

The boys aren't blowing the whistle in our big town any more. Possibly you've heard about it. It seems that Police Commissioner Mulrooney sent out an order the other day to the effect that the boys should leave their Tom Thumb trumpets at home.

Ostensibly this was an order designated to expedite traffic in some way or other. Preferably forward. It was also suggested that the muting of the brasses would lend still further impetus to the noise abatement movement. Some people complain there are too many noises in the metropolis. This in spite of the fact that La Guardia is no longer campaigning. Tish and double tosh.

The order probably has a far deeper significance. In the picturesque argot of Tammany Hall to blow the whistle means to squeal, yell copper and tell all. Even a cat-hopping slant at the newspaper headlines of the day will disclose that there has been much furious tooting of the whistle in political arenas.

Vaudevillians are reviving the long bearded ones. Are you in politics or don't you believe in graft? How that used to panic 'em in Peoria, eh, Willard?

Grand Jury rooms are boiling over with probes, quizzes and nonpartisan peep holers. The shrill blast of the vindictive whistle has uncorked a Pandora flash of pre-war astonishers right off the good Scow E.

A horse doctor with Democratic fetlocks was paid more than $40,000 for one day's practice. If a man is that expert, why should he have to practice? This proves opportunities were greater and gaudier before the machine age came. An automobile doctor today is lucky to grab off a full day's pay between Edison questionnaires.

The Very, Very Kind Lady.

Another gentleman distinguished for party fealty and unceasing devotion to the public weal wanted to build a summer home at Blue Point where the wild oysters gambol au naturel on the moon bathed sands. But he didn't have enough money. A very kind lady heard his story and her heart was touched.

What a cruel, inconsiderate world! They have milk funds for babies, Christmas charities for the poor, relief for the farmers and food for the Belgians. But nobody ever seems to want to do things for an all right politician who is sobbing in his clam chowder because he hasn't got a nice big house out in Blue Point with cam chairs on the front porch, a radio in the living room and a bed of red geraniums on the lawn.

This picture of misery was too poignant for the very kind lady, so she went out and got hold of $10,000 for the all-right politician, and he was able to get his nice big house, and just to show you how Good Deeds and Kind Thoughts are rewarded, on that very day something Awfully Fine happened. The husband of the very fine lady was appointed to a political job and his salary was trebled.

This is an instance, I am happy to relate, where blowing the whistle brought to light a beautiful human relationship, a moving revelation of understanding and sympathy, the like of which is all too rare in this sort of workaday world.

Of course it may have seemed that the bread which the very kind lady threw upon the water did come back to the family, larger with incredible speed, but then it should be remembered that this is a fast age, and an aviator can start a romance in Los Angeles in the morning, get a marriage license in Indianapolis at noon and a divorce at Valley Stream before sundown.

Beauties of Seal Music.

Aside from the suggestion that there may be political significance in the Mulrooney order which has taken the nickel plated canaries away from the coppers in the metropolitan streets, the question remains whether or not it is for the best. This all depends.

Personally whistle music never appealed to me very much. It always seemed to lack something vital. And after you've heard one whistle you've heard them all. A traffic cop's whistle in Yazoo City, Mass., sounds just about as offensive as another traffic cop's at Fifth Ave. and 42nd St.

It may be that I am prejudiced in the matter of music. I go into transports of ecstasy, I mean to say I go quite nuts, when an animal trainer brings a trained sea lion out on the stage, squats him down in front of row of 1914 automobile horns and, by the exercise of sheer Wagnerian magic, persuades him to sneeze into the funnel ends, causing to arise therefrom a miscellany of snorts, grunts and wails which when freely translated amounts to the "Good Old Summer Time," with the usual Macy discount for cash.

I am willing to concede that you cannot intelligently compare a sea lion with a traffic cop, except possibly on Fridays, when they both eat fish, but neither can you compare a sea lion with a Euclidean metric well done on both sides.

Everything's All Wrong

From the start there has been little originality in the regulation of traffic. Any instrument of sound would have been better than the routine bourgeois whistle. A rolling drum, a disturbing saxophone, or a lulling harp. Particularity a lulling harp. Only girls should play harps. Flaxen haired girls in flowing white chiffons. For female pedestrians they would play "The Maiden's Prayer." For suspender wearers, it would be simple to change the lyrics, and, if necessary, the prayer.

But this is wasted thought. Sounds are silent. From now on in our town traffic cabs and flows to the accompaniment of white gloved gestures. There is still need for a rhythmic, persuasive school. A loose, disorganized system of hand waving and thumb jerking is unthinkable. Nobody minds a great deal being told to stop or go to the swing of poetry, or the harmony of physical motion.

It seems safe in forecasting that there would be little discontent or restlessness at any busy corner where the traffic cop tore off a series of Bill Robinson taps, in a way approaching the authentic manner, before indicating the movers should stop and the stoppers should move.

In the more esthetic centres it might, of course, be necessary to employ the technique of the ballet with stiff, jerky leaping, bounding and whirling against a portable background of apple blossoms, but Commissioner Mulrooney should worry about that.

Nowhere is there a more resourceful police staff. One week his men interpret in colorful detail the arts of May West and the next, with Hampdenesque skill, the sublimity of thought of the pious Earl Carroll cult.

Even when they wave at you now, with whistles gone, you wonder if you shouldn't sort of humor them and wave back with a handsome silk monogrammed handkerchief and shriek "Peeps, old fruit!"

Love's Sacrifice By Mildred Barbour

"Let me go. How dare you bring me here."

"Not they!" he declared carelessly.

"Come. Let's go."

They took a taxi up Riverside Drive and turned into one of the side streets that are flanked by towering apartment buildings. At the third from the corner the cab stopped, and Harding assisted Lois to descend. The entrance was quietly impressive and the foyer discreetly expensive. It was also deserted. A noiseless elevator appeared suddenly when a decorated panel slid back into the wall. The elevator-boy grinned and greeted Harding by name. Lois glanced up in surprise as the elevator bore them aloft.

"You must be a frequent visitor here, if you're so well-known."

"Oh, I drop in once or twice every week," he answered carelessly.

He piloted her down a deserted corridor. At a mahogany door, he paused and produced a latch-key.

Lois drew back with a little exclamation, but he opened the door and fairly pushed her in.

"What--" she began indignantly.

"Don't be a little idiot!" he laughed easily. "I'm not trying to abduct you. I always carry the key to this place. It's a sort of open house. We drift in whether anyone's home or not. All my friends have carte blanche here."

Lois hesitated, bit her lip. It seemed odd. And yet she might be making a fool of herself, if she protested. While she hesitated, he closed the door and, leaning against it, essayed to take her into his arms.

She struck at him blindly. "Let me go! How dare you bring me here?"

She wasn't frightened. Only terribly angry. If he'd told her where they were going; when he'd said that he wanted to talk to her, she wouldn't have resented it so. But to trick her into it--

He tried to be soothing. "Now Lois, don't make a scene! There's nothing improper about this. I assure you. I won't try to kiss you again, if you don't want me to. Honest. It was my mistake. I'm sorry."

She said icily: "Open the door."

For answer, he leaned against it and folded his arms. "If you're determined to go, you'll have to go alone. I refuse to take you. And, if you knew what the elevator-boy and any one else who sees you will think when you leave a place like this unescorted, you'd reflect twice before doing it."

She said: "I don't care what the elevator-boy thinks. I'll never see him again in my life."

"Don't be silly," he said impatiently. "I'm not going to hurt you. Be a good girl and come into the living-room and let me show you the works of art that I've collected here--"

"They're really pretty good. And, after that, we'll sit quietly and talk for a bit and then I'll take you home."

Lois leaned against a very beautiful tapestry that covered one wall of the tiny foyer, but, for once, she was insensible to beauty and art. She surveyed Philip Harding from under the brim of her chic little hat with eyes that were the color of sea-water on a December day, and just as said.

"Please don't flatter yourself that I am afraid of you," she said evenly. "I'm not. Nor am I fearful of my reputation. The idea of remaining here alone with you simply doesn't appeal to me. I'd prefer the movies."

"We can go to the movies later--or to a night club, where there is a good show," he offered.

"I prefer to go now," she said steadily. "Whatever you have to say, you can tell me on the way."

"But I can't!" he protested. "It's--it's something serious--private."

"Please stand aside," Lois walked toward the door. "Who's being silly now?"

"Are you going to scream?" he demanded vexedly. "They always do in stories."

"No. I'll save my breath for action," she told him grimly.

His answer to that was to catch her in his arms.

FAST DIVORCING

LEWES, (Sussex), Eng., (UP)—It took Justice Avory an average of six minutes each to dispose of 27 divorce cases.

By RONALD W. WAGONER

United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Aug. 28. (UP)—Hollywood received quite a shock one night not so long ago when the police picked up an old man lying on a sidewalk and announced that Peter the Hermit was dead.

The films would go on without Peter the Hermit but there are many old timers in Hollywood who feel the place would not be the same if Peter, barefooted and with his shaggy white beard flowing to the winds, was not seen once in a while on the streets.

Hours after the word had gone around that Peter had passed on it was found that the aged man in the morque was a double of the famous character. Peter was hale and happy far up in the hills back of Hollywood where he has lived in a hovel for 20 years—going higher as the growing movie colony pressed on his door.

No one, as far as is known, knows Peter's real name or why he came to California and elected to live in the hills.

At the time of his arrival the movies were funny flickering melodramas and Peter paid no attention to them. Finally, however, the directors noticed that the hermit had distinguished classical features and efforts were made to induce him into the films.

Peter resisted for years all efforts to assign him to prominent roles.

He frequently appeared at the studios to play extra bits and earn a few dollars when he needed money to care for his dogs, burros, cats and scores of tame birds.

Scores of famous painters and sculptors who were drawn to Hollywood have attempted to do Peter in oils or stone. He accommodated very few.

A few years ago Peter claimed he was promised a part in a film which later went to Rod La Roque. The hermit sued for $150,000 but the case never came to court. This appeared to be the one time in Peter's life he wanted a big role in the movies and he retired in anger to his hills after the unhappy ending.

The aged man—he is 80 years old—appears contented with his simple life. His animal pets adore him and Peter's chief objection to tourists who sometimes visit his home is that they frighten his pets.

Peter has lived on real estate worth millions of dollars today. It was practically worthless when he first came to the hills in Laurel most exclusive sections. The hermit first pitched his camp near the bottom. As the film folk made fortunes and built mansions on the slopes of the Canyon he was forced to retreat.

The old man is a vegetarian and has a philosophy about a God of nature who keeps him well and strong.

Ice Is Aid In Many Displays

Even Straw Hats Now Kept On Ice for Hot Weather Displays

"Merchants are utilizing a new and refreshing way of displaying merchandise", reports Robert McKnight, merchandising director National Association of Ice Industries. "By freezing the objects into a block of pure, clean ice, an unsurpassed effect of sparkle and coldness is achieved — particularly attractive on days of summer heat. "Flowers, fruit, vegetables, fish, meat, bottled beverages... even china, glassware and electric lights may be thus displayed very effectively. Colored electric lights, playing upon the display, enhance its cool, attractive sparkle." Modern ice plants are equipped to freeze almost any desired object into a block of ice weighing 200 to 400 lbs. The object is held in the ice by almost invisible wires while freezing. Distilled water is used. "Haberdashers, promoting 'summer coolness, have hit upon a novel use of this idea', says Mr. McKnight. "Straw hats are frozen into the ice at jaunty angles... and the appeal of coolness is irresistible." Flowers, plants and even small animals are often frozen into ice cakes for classroom study... thus preventing the deterioration of the specimens. When not in use, the blocks are kept in refrigerators.

HOW TO SOLVE YOUR PROBLEMS

By James M. Heady, Psy. D.

Lesson No. 2

Few facts concerning the greatest thing in the world. You don't agree? What of it?

What is the greatest thing in the world? You're wrong, the answer is not "love." It is a great thing but not the greatest. It was love interest "that launched a thousand ships" and stands 'em up in the aisles in 2000 movie theatres, but there's something greater. Some will say "money" and that is quite an item, but by comparison sinks into insignificance. We might go down the line and enumerate friendship, knowledge, patience, language and many material and immaterial things and I'd still stick to my conclusion.

So that you don't dial out on me and leave me talking to myself, I'll tell you what it is. The greatest thing in the world is the human body—your 204 bones (count 'em) and see if you've been cheated), with the muscles and in innards and outwards, and what have you? Your face, figure, brains (if any), etc., as is, or as you make them with the help of education or the lack of it.

We'll make a brief pause for station announcements and I'll explain what I mean by education. An educated person is one who knows and who can utilize a certain number of facts. A fact, incidentally, is something that can be demonstrated and proven.

Listen to This One
Of course, facts are relative and often an individual possession. This is illustrated by the soldier who went to the regimental tailor with his request, "I want a pair of pants with stripes down the sides like the officers wear." "But," said the tailor, "they wouldn't let you wear 'em." The first time they caught you with 'em on they'd throw you into the guard house." "Put 'em on the inside," replied the soldier. "What good would that do, nobody could see them?" was the soldier's answer. "I'd know I had 'em," was the conclusion, "and that's good enough for me."

Of course what you don't know doesn't exist—for you. It matters not how many people have known a thing, until you know it, it is not a fact for you and therefore not a part of your education.

What I am driving at is this: It is education that will make it possible for you to care for that most wonderful thing in the world that's yours, all yours. Our friend Thomas well known star of Uncle Tom's Cabin, was wrong when he remarked to the bold, bad Simon Legree—"my body belongs to you."

Your body, my friend, is yours and yours only. In fact, it's the only thing that you really own. (Laugh that one off if you can).

Your body is "the temple of the living God." Through its functioning you may enjoy the glories of heaven or "you may suffer the tortures of hell. It's up to you."

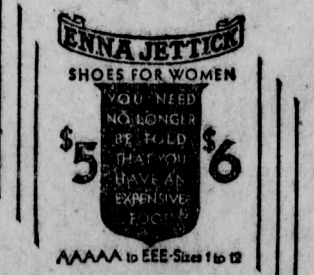

BENFLEET, (Essex), Eng., (UP)—Her father's will stipulated that none of his daughters should do housework, Mrs. Mabel V. B. Parker revealed in court.

Health Spells Success

You can fill it full of bathtub gin, squirrel whiskey, the kind that makes you jump around a little, and ruin your stomach, kidneys, eyesight and prospects for success. You can blame it on the boy friend, the girl friend, the boss, the Eighteenth amendment or anything else, but believe me, you're like the two boys who were going past a new tombstone on which were inscribed these words: "I am not dead, but sleeping." One of the boys said to the other, "Dat white folks ain't foolin' nobody but his-self." And neither are you.

A healthy mind in a healthy body is one of the first factors for success and happiness. There are a few who have climbed to the top round of the ladder of human desire and dragged their tortured, diseased bodies behind, but these are the exception and not the rule. Most people who lack health lack everything else.

Thousands are asking. How can I enjoy perfect health? My answer is, "Spend as much time studying yourself as you would spend studying and taking care of your automobile."

You drive up to a service station; the attendant says, "What kind of oil?" You reply, perhaps "western medium." You know exactly what to put in your liver, but you don't know what to do for your liver.

You know the kind of gas that makes the best combustion for the old bus, but have little or no idea of the kind of chow that will produce the vim and vitality that your multi-billion dollar body deserves.

Think it over. You are the fellow I'm talking to.

I am not going into any detail about air, food, water, sunshine, exercise or any other material factor except to say, "Get the information and you can get it out of the Redwood City Standard and Times-Gazette by reading the health column." I shall deal with the health problem, the care of the body from a purely "psychological" angle. Dr. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., is quoted as having said that 97 per cent of all bodily diseases are psychological in their inception.

Just what process of thought mental activity, or the absence of it, is not always disclosed except after diligent investigation, but what I mean is that before wrong living, comes wrong thinking. Ignorance which is the greatest if not the only sin, is the basic cause and education or a knowledge of the facts the basic remedy.

"Mind is the master power that moulds and makes:

And man is mind, and evermore he takes
The seal of thought, and shaping what he wills,
Brings forth a thousand joys, a thousand ills.

Now that you've read it, read it again, because what I have to say from now on is based on today's lesson, and I want you to remember it.

AMPHIBIOUS AUTO
COLORADO SPRINGS, (UP)—George Bottje's automobile has amphibian qualities. He was caught in a cloudburst on a highway near here and his car was swept into a stream flowing by the road. The car floated 300 yards and grounded, permitting him to land safely.

SAME AS CHARITY
NEWCASTLE, Ind., (UP)—Prosecution, like charity, begins at home, decided Franklyn George, Henry county prosecuting attorney, so he brought charges against Omer Morrel, who made and sold beer in the same building that housed George's office.

Harmsworth Trophy

Gar Wood, premier U. S. speedboat king, will defend the Harmsworth Trophy today against a foreign invasion consisting of Miss Betty Cartstairs and Scott-Paine, both Britishers, at Detroit.

Unfortunately the proposed third British entrant, the late Sir Henry Seagrave, will not be present to display the once-marvelous creation—Miss England II—which crashed several months ago, killing Seagrave and his mechanic after they had succeeded in breaking the world speedboat record. Though it was conceded that Seagrave had lived easily would have captured the trophy in his boat which was capable of 100 miles per hour, the two other remaining British entrants are believed enough to cause Wood some concern about retaining the cup.

Scott-Paine's boat was built by himself while Miss Cartstairs is using the same craft she raced over the Detroit River in 1929 in a futile effort to wrest the trophy from the U. S. It is called Miss Estelle V.

Wood's Two Boats Entered
Gar Wood holds the world's record of 93.123 miles per hour which he made with his Miss America VIII last year. His Miss America IX will be used to defend the Harmsworth Trophy tomorrow. It is probable that Miss America VIII will also participate. Wood captured the Harmsworth races here last year with a time of more than 79 miles per hour.

The Harmsworth Trophy first was won by Wood in 1921 and has been retained by him ever since, although it has not been competed for every year since that time. The motor boat experts in this country are agreed that Great Britain has the best chance in many years of winning the trophy.

The races are held in conjunction with the Detroit Cup races which extend over a period of several days, beginning tomorrow and ending Monday. Numerous other craft participate in all types of races. More than 350 boats are expected to compete in some 20 events.

Expect 150,000 Spectators
The Detroit Gold Cup Committee and the Yachtmen's Association of America sponsor the annual regatta.

WORTH $100,000?

That's what the San Francisco Seals want for Frank Crosetti, sensational shortstop who is understood to have caught the eye of scouts for the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs.

The start and finish are both located at the Detroit Yacht Club and a crowd of 150,000 is expected to witness the contests.

The Harmsworth Trophy was originally donated by the late Lord Northcliffe, British publisher, and is awarded to the first boat winning two races out of three over a 30 mile course consisting of six laps or five miles per lap. Competing boats must not exceed 40 feet overall length although the horsepower is unlimited.

The first race for the trophy begins today and continues until one of the countries wins two races.

Jack Oakie Makes Hit in "Sap from Syracuse"

Do you want a good hearty laugh? Then see and hear Jack Oakie in his latest wise-cracking, grin-freshet, "The Sap From Syracuse," at the Sequoia theatre Sunday and Monday August 31, Sept. 1. It's a rib-tickler from tick to tick. Audiences who saw the opening show last night rocked in their seats in gleeful riot as Oakie shot across crack after crack.

Oakie has never done anything

A STRIKE-OUT KING

Bill Phels of the Phoenix club of the Arizona State League, who has established himself as the strike-out king of that circuit, has been sold to the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League.

better, for "The Sap From Syracuse" last season's comedy highlight of the Broadway stage, is a situation comedy just made to order for Oakie's talent. As the butt of every Syracuse joke, Oakie naively butts a few jokes himself, until, through an unexpected legacy, he is enabled to gratify his one ambition, to see how the world on the other side of the "big pond" lives.

On the boat, he meets Ginger Rogers, the charming object of operations for a pair of crooks, and also a pair of sophisticated gold-diggers. Mistaken for a famous engineer supposed to be traveling incognito Oakie finds himself the center of attraction, all of which is very confusing to the modest boy from the backwoods. Through a series of amusing misadventures Oakie wends his way to success in love, and the story ends in a convulsing climax, that proves the hero to be not so dumb as he looks.

Jury Discharged in Osterreich Case

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25 (UP)—Unable to reach a verdict in the murder case of Mrs. Walburga Osterreich, a jury of six men and six women was dismissed late today by Superior Judge Carlos Hardy.

Mrs. Osterreich was accused in the death of her husband, Fred Osterreich, wealthy garment man, who was shot eight years ago in his home in a fashionable section of Los Angeles.

was shot eight years ago in his home in a fashionable section of Los Angeles.

Otto Sanhuber, described as the "attic lover" of Mrs. Osterreich during a dozen or more years he secretly lived in attics of her homes, was charged as the actual killer.

A jury recently found Sanhuber guilty of manslaughter but he was freed when his attorneys successfully contended that all crimes except murder and treason were outlawed under California's statute of limitations.

The state charged that Mrs. Osterreich attempted to shield Sanhuber by permitting him to lock her in a closet. When police came she blamed burglars for the slaying.

MENLO PARK

Menlo Parlor N. S. G. W. is making active preparations for the 9th of September celebration. The members of the parlor are to march with the San Mateo county division, which will include all the parlor of the county. The Native Sons will wear garments similar to those worn by lumbermen. Floats depicting a redwood forest are to be a feature of this division and to add color to the display the Native Daughters in all their loveliness, will be in the line of march, becomingly dressed in carnival colors. The celebration this year is to be in San Francisco.

Florence Coleman Britton, 20-year-old Oakland girl and niece of Eastland Britton, manager of the Bear Gulch Water Company in Menlo Park, has landed a star part in the movies. Standing in an outer lobby of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayear casting office in Hollywood the other day, Sam Goldwyn, producer, happened to be passing and saw the blonde Oakland girl. He called her into his office and the result was a contract to play a role with Ronald Colman.

Mayor James Rolph carried the five precincts in this city by a substantial majority, the result of the good work done by the Rolph-for-Governor Club of Menlo Park. The members put forth their best efforts to gain this splendid result. Wednesday, the president, D. E. O'Keefe, vice-president W. H. Weeden, and Secretary Ward Monroe of the club sent the governor-elect a telegram of congratulations on his splendid victory.

The home of J. Barman on Santa Cruz and Hobart avenues was practically destroyed by fire recently. For over two hours the fire department fought the flames finally subduing them but not before the building was nearly destroyed. The origin of the blaze is wrapped in mystery.

Last Monday at a meeting of the traffic officers and police officers of the state Mayor W. H. Weeden of this city was elected a member. The gathering was held in the Palace Hotel and was attended by a large crowd. Mayor Weeden delivered a gracious speech and was given a well-deserved applause.

The many new buildings being erected in this city demonstrate the prosperity of the community. The activity in real estate is another evidence that people want to live and do business in this veritable garden of eden.

The police officers of Atherton are elated over a raise of $15 a month for automobile allowance granted by the city council last Monday. This was done through the suggestion of Chief Mull. The officers now receive an auto allowance of $40 a month.

The play recently given by St. Joseph Players was a financial success, the tidy sum of $300 being netted for the alumni association. The funds of the association are spent in improving the facilities of St. Joseph's parochial school.

Former Mayor Jack Ellis has returned to Menlo Park after an absence of several weeks in a San Francisco hospital. He is now in good health which is good news to his numerous friends.

The many friends of Charles Cooley of Palo Alto are pleased to learn of his re-election as supervisor of his district. His vote was substantial.

Chief Mull of Atherton is to install three more signals, red lights and telephones in his district which will add to the efficiency of the police department.

Fred Metcalf arrived home for election last Monday after an absence of many weeks in a tour of the state. His many friends were glad to greet him and welcome him back.

Last week a baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. Paterson of Menlo Park. The mother and daughter are doing nicely.

At a meeting of the city council held Monday evening last W. E. Monroe was given the insurance on the city car. The policy is to be given into the custody of the city clerk.

An ordinance was passed fixing the amount of money to be raised from taxation to conduct the city government for the current year. The tax rate is reasonable and not excessive, being one dollar on the one hundred dollars of assessable property of the city.

A resolution was adopted fixing September 12 as the date for the planning commission to make its report and adopt the zoning ordinance prepared by the city attorney and the commission.

City Engineer Mehl was instructed to prepare plans and specifications for street work to be done in Stanford Park. Over sixty per cent of the property owners in that locality desire the improvements to be made.

SEES NEW INDUSTRY

George A. Cavanaugh, professor of agricultural chemistry at Cornell University, foresees a new industry for the Pacific Coast in the 72,000,000 tons of kelp produced annually along the southern California coast. He predicted that the kelp will be used to feed cattle, hogs and chickens.
